Dana Sitar : 30: Congratulations, You're an Adult. (No, Seriously.) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised 30: Congratulations, You're an Adult. (No, Seriously.):

Inside, you'll get such gems as: "Sometimes I wear flip flops instead of sweeping, and if I had a baby, they would let me keep it." "I have too many gray hairs to be this confused about life." "Why don't adults eat ice cream cake more often?" and other observations on becoming an adult, but, like, not quite.

From the Author This book is inspired by the real-life event of me being 30 this year, I think it's kind of funny. You might, too, if you've ever been 30 or somewhere in your 20s or a millennial. From the Back Cover "Sometimes I wear flip flops instead of sweeping, and if I had a baby, they would let me keep it." About the Author Dana Sitar is an author and blogger from Wisconsin. She writes about writing, life, comedy and love for books and blogs and sometimes things people care about like Huffington Post and that time she had an article published in the Onion.
