Alex Kerr : A Brief Guide for the High School Moviemaker before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Brief Guide for the High School Moviemaker:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. ExcellentBy P. DotoliI am a counselor and used this book to make my own documentary. Having very little knowledge of where to start it was a tremendous help.

Want to make your own music video, comedy sketch, animation, or short drama? Or maybe you just want to goof off with a camera and have it look pseudo-professional. Either way, this book blends humor and practical advice for aspiring moviemakers everywhere. Covered in the text: How to make a movie with equipment that you probably already have -- Simple techniques to greatly improve your Directing, Editing, Acting and Camerawork -- Quick, legal ways to get industry-grade software inexpensively -- Info on Permissions, Copyrights, and Distribution -- How to shoot solo or manage a crew of your peers. Also great for schools with A/V clubs!

About the Author Alex Kerr spent a lot of time in high school pattering around with a video camera. A couple of his movie attempts were miserable failures, but others won awards and got him into college. He graduated from NYU with a BFA in Film and Television and currently works at a talent agency in New York City.
