J. Chapman : A New History of British Documentary before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A New History of British Documentary:

A New History of British Documentary is the first comprehensive overview of documentary production in Britain from early film to the present day. It covers both the film and television industries and demonstrates how documentary practice has adapted to changing institutional and ideological contexts.

Chapman describes this volume as both a partially researched textbook and an attempt to map the field. as a convenient one-stop-shop source of reliable information and thoughtful comment on a huge subject it will prove useful for some years to come. it will endure further as an equally handy summary of the state of received knowledge at the time of its writing. (Patrick Russell, s in History, history.ac.uk, June, 2016)About the AuthorJames Chapman is Professor of Film Studies at the University of Leicester, UK, and editor of the Historical Journal of Film, Radio and Television. His previous work includes The British at War: Cinema, State and Propaganda, 1939-1945 (1998), Licence To Thrill: A Cultural History of the James Bond Films (1999) and Past and Present: National Identity and the British Historical Film (2005). He is also co-editor (with Mark Glancy and Sue Harper) of The New Film History: Sources, Methods, Approaches.
