Ed "Stewpot" Stewart is one of country's best loved DJs. In this intimate and very frank autobiography he reveals the truth about his extraordinary career that has taken him from blagging interviews with Nat King Cole for Hong Kong radio, to becoming one of the best-known voices in the country. As a DJ on the pioneering pirate radio station Radio London, he was instrumental in putting the swing into the Sixties along with legendary names such as John Peel, Kenny Everitt, and Tony Blackburn. Packed with celebrity anecdotes, this is the ultimate behind-the-scenes portrait of life as the original superstar DJ.

About the AuthorEd Stewart began his broadcasting career with Hong Kong radio. After returning to England in 1965 he quickly became a household name on pirate radio station Radio London and from there went on to become one of Radio 1's biggest stars, netting over 16 million listeners for his show Junior Choice. He successfully made a crossover to TV presenting both Top of the Pops and Crackerjack. Today he continues to present his ever popular Sunday evening show on Radio 2.
