NPR : People We Meet: Unforgettable Conversations before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised People We Meet: Unforgettable Conversations:

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. As an NPR junkie I really enjoyed the CD by Annette Delaney. Very interesting interviews. As an NPR junkie I really enjoyed the CD. Especially the interview with Temple Grandin. I am passing the CD on to another NPR fan so she can enjoy it as well. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Worthwhile. By B If you missed these radio talk shows the first time around, and I think that most people probably did because they are usually aired when the majority of the adult population is at work, it is certainly beneficial to listen to them from an audio book. They are heartwarming and inspiring. I'm surprised that there were not more people reviewing them. I intend on reading almost all of the books mentioned in the broadcast: "Carpet People", "Prepared for a Purpose" and "Even Silence has an End". The information about the facial reconstruction website, "Let's Face It" was invaluable.

Nationally known NPR on-air personalities—including Melissa Block, David Greene, Rachel Martin, Guy Raz, Scott Simon, Susan Stamberg and many more—share the lasting impressions made during interviews with a wide variety of exceptional individuals. Each story is introduced by the NPR host and offers a candid account of how the encounter was particularly meaningful to them. These are thought-provoking and emotionally resonant interviews with both the famous and the nearly anonymous, who reveal themselves over the course of a conversation in delightful, moving, and surprising ways.
