Original Radio Broadcasts : Phil Harris-Alice Faye Show (Old Time Radio) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Phil Harris-Alice Faye Show (Old Time Radio):

I never knew the kids were actually adults portraying kids. I first heard one of the radio shows on a Sunday afternoon in Chicago last year. I never knew Phil Harris and Alice Faye had a radio series. I wish the packaging could have been a different type of box. They use that thin, white, hollow blow molded plastic that was used in the 70's 80's for those cassette box sets. I accidentally slit the white plastic trying to cut the shrink wrap off. There are no tabs or pocket to hold the booklet in place when you open or close the box. If your fumbling trying to close the box while driving, I'd suggest removing the booklet before your trip. I find the CD's a bit difficult to hear driving in the car. Of course my front speakers are in the bottom of the front doors. The recording level seems to have been too low when the CD's were recorded, but the applause and laugh tracks are noticeably louder. I've experimented setting the radio's tone control to Pop, Talk, Jazz and Country to see which sounds best, and it seems to sound better on the Pop setting. I've adjusted the bass and treble too during playback. I have not listened to the CD's on the home stereo yet but plan to in the winter months. They should sound fine on the home speakers. There are 10 CD's in this collection that slip into plastic sleeves that are attached to the center point of where the box hinges. There are two radio programs per disc. I wish they put more "tracks" on the CD so you could skip around to different parts or go back to a particular line you wanted to listen to again, replay the songs or skip the Rexall commercials if you wanted to. I have purchased 4 different box sets from the Phil Harris - Alice Faye Shows and they are very, funny entertaining. The booklets are very informative and have the Show Listings and information printed, as well. 3 of 3

More fun with Phil and Alice By M of Liverpool I really have enjoyed listening to this series over the last seven 10 cd sets. The jokes sometimes are little old but that doesn't make them any less funny and there is such a warmth to Phil, Alice and the gang that you can't help but laugh along. I also enjoy the songs that are neatly shoe horned in, normally with a nicely timed joke about Phil scaring people off or Alice drawing a crowd, shame they can't be reissued separate from the shows as I really love the musical styles here and I have only been able to find old 1930's re releases of Phil's work on CD with a best of which is a mixed bag but still very good. As I am a big fan of this Golden Age comedy I have really enjoyed being able to listen and collect this very well restored and presented CD's from radio spirit. I think it is a shame that they have not been able to release all the other great Golden Age shows they release in the same way all in the correct order rather mixes of old and new. The only other show they have treated the same way in any detail is the Green Hornet with the CD releases tracking the masked hero's adventures more or less in order.

Phil Harris was brash, egotistical, and charming as hell. Alice Faye was regarded by George Gershwin and Cole Porter as the best female singer in Hollywood. Together, they starred in one of the most uninhibited and funny comedy series on radio. Benefiting from the likeability of its stars, a wonderfully cast group of supporting players (Elliott Lewis, Walter Tetley, Robert North, Jeanine Roos, and Anne Whitfield), and one of the most prolific and clever writing teams of the mid-twentieth century (Ray Singer and Dick Chevillat), The Phil Harris-Alice Faye Show is a complete delight. This collection features 20 digitally remastered programs, eighteen of which are available for the first time anywhere. So, sit back, relax, and enjoy the misadventures of the Harrises, their two daughters, and one left handed guitar player. Includes a Program Guide by Rodney Bowcock with photographs and background information about the programs.
